

Abstract:

Dark matter constitutes 85% of the matter in the universe, but we know very little about its fundamental nature. In this talk I'll review some of the exciting new advances in the search for dark matter focusing on recent discoveries of dark matter dominated dwarf galaxies. These tiny galaxies reside in our "cosmic backyard" and can have hundreds of times more dark matter than normal matter.