

Abstract:

The Orion facility, at the Atomic Weapon Establishment in the UK, is developing a support laser to help in the development and integration of new diagnostic systems. UK law requires that a risk assessment is carried out to assess the risks from their work on anyone who may be affected. This talk is to reiterate that the non-beam hazards are usually overlooked in the development stage and are one of the major obstacles to high power laser design.