

Science Communication Training

Tuesday, 11 August 2020 08:00 (1 hour)

A parallel session on Science Communication will be hosted on Tuesday 8/11, 8-9 am (as part of the 53rd Annual Users Meeting). The session will be led by Becky Thompson, head of the Fermilab Office of Education and Public Outreach. Becky is an impressive and skilled science communicator, who is currently managing and reinventing the lab's outreach programs.

It should be a very interesting and useful session. Building science communication skills is fundamental not only for outreach, but also for scientific presentations and funding opportunities.

This will be an interactive workshop and participation will be limited to the first 30 to register, with later registrations placed in the waitlist. Currently all spots are full, with an active waitlist.

For any questions and concerns, please contact Manolis at ekargian@fnal.gov.
